In the center of the dashboard, there is a search bar with the text 'Geben Sie hier Ihren Seitentitel ein.' and a 'Google-Suche' button.

Below the search bar, there are several tabs: 'Allgemein (500)', 'Internet', 'Spaß', and 'Neuer Tab'. The 'Allgemein (500)' tab is selected.

On the left side, there are two panels: 'Allgemeine Einstellungen' and 'Anordnung'. The 'Allgemeine Einstellungen' panel has a 'Allgemein' sub-panel and a button 'Diesen Tab veröffentlichen'. The 'Anordnung' panel shows a grid of boxes numbered 1 through 4, representing the layout of the dashboard.

On the right side, there is a 'Tab löschen' button and a 'Diesen Tab löschen' button.

The main content area is divided into several widgets:

- Paris, France: A weather widget showing the date '11 Juni Montag' and temperature '16°C'. It also displays a 10-day forecast for 'Dienstag 13/18°C', 'Mittwoch 11/19°C', and 'Donnerstag 12/22°C'.
- Recherche Web: A search widget with a search bar and buttons for 'Google.de', 'Yahoo!', 'Bing', and 'Wikipedia DE'. It shows 'Noch kein Sucheintrag'.
- (500) Google News: International: A news widget with a dropdown menu for 'International', 'Schweiz', 'Wirtschaft', and 'Sport'. - Flickr Most Interesting Photos: A photo gallery widget displaying a grid of various images.

At the bottom left, there are two more widgets: 'Webnote' and 'To Do List'. The 'Webnote' widget contains a welcome message and instructions. The 'To Do List' widget is currently empty.

Newsfeeds

Newsfeeds, also called web feeds or RSS feeds, allows parts of a web site to be made available to other websites or individual subscribers. Content from the source site appears on your own website or in your "newsreader" (software that allows you to pick up and organise RSS content). When the content on the source site is updated, it is also automatically updated on your website or in your newsreader.

 Newsfeeds are often labelled as XML or RSS or using this symbol.

 Eldis offers two Newsfeed services - for individuals and for website managers

Newsfeeds for individual subscribers

As an individual user you can receive and organise newsfeeds with a "newsreader" (sometimes also called an "aggregator"), a piece of software that collects, manages and displays feeds. Some newsreaders display content in a window or list view similar to any email-programme, others have browser-based interfaces. Newsreaders can also be built into web browsers, e-mail programmes, etc. Most readers can be downloaded from the internet, some free of charge, some have to be purchased.

Once the newsreader has been installed, you simply have to pick the newsfeeds that you want to receive. Most websites providing feeds, mark their feeds "RSS" or "XML" or with a bright orange button (see above), so they can be recognised easily.

By receiving newsfeeds you will always be updated automatically with the latest content from the websites you have chosen to monitor. This means you should spend less time surfing the internet as the content comes to you rather than you having to go to find it yourself. Unlike subscribing to e-mail newsletters, there is no need to provide your email address, which means

Below this is the Google logo and a search bar containing the text 'libraries ireland'. A red arrow points from the search bar up to the 'News' link in the navigation bar. Below the search bar, the text 'Search' is followed by 'About 85 results (0.18 seconds)'. On the left, there are tabs for 'Everything' and 'Images'. The main content area shows a search result titled 'Doors close at Moy Library for final time' with a green checkmark icon. A yellow arrow points from this result down to the 'RSS' link at the bottom of the page. Below the result, there is a section 'Keep up to date with these results:' with a bullet point: '• Create an email alert for libraries ireland'. Below this is the 'Gooooooooogle' logo with a right-pointing arrow, and a row of numbers '1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8' with 'Next' to the right.
